

Afraid

It is required by the “direction” of Society. It’s in the first order instinct, Fear of the Unknown. Everybody has the survival instinct, if you don’t know what it is “it might eat you RUN!!!” It is in the animal, before intelligence.

You say you have no Fear; you have resolved and overcome all your fears. It may be true that you are free of fear, but your freedom from the Fear of the Unknown is accomplished with a shield you have constructed. The Fear is still there.

The shield is what ever it is that you believe, is “other than the physical” (the Unknown). God, Intellect, Cosmic Consciousness and Love are “common” shields, they have answers that automatically fill in for “the Unknown” at the subconscious level and you are free of fear.

Fear of the Unknown, there is a reason for it. The Fear is to keep you subjective to the Unknown. You cannot face or question it; you are driven by it away from it, into the physical world.

I had a fine shield, made of Love, Cosmic Consciousness and all of God’s best stuff, shredded and thrown in my face. I kept my eyes open. The Fear of the Unknown is “direction into the physical world”.

What I’ve said so far might have you peaking over your shield, but that thing has deep roots. Roots secured by the Feeling that you are safe from the Fear, which is a basic truth that Society distorts to cause the need and acceptance of control, the shield.

The shield is a complex structure of things you know to be true. Anything that is interpreted by you as other than something in that structure activates the Fear to denounce it (the essence of Kill the Messenger).

Even though you see a good thought in a particular thing said, you cannot assemble the whole of what is being said because of the discounted information. Information discounted by interpreting it not to fit into the structure of your shield. You judge the information by some pre-existing rule about something that is not relevant to what is being said.

This is all about a discovery, something becoming known, something previously Unknown. It activates the Fear of the Unknown and then, due to the subject aggravates the mechanism and keeps it active.

Stop the Fear from discounting new knowledge. Understand as you would the rules to a computer game or some high tech equipment, it is as it is, no argument. Identify parts that match a part of the structure of your shield (things you know), use that as a foundation to form the understanding of the new knowledge by finding a compatible way to interpret the information instead of discounting it. It’s the same method of constructing as in science fiction making up another world, but the information is all about here and now Life on Earth. The information that you don’t understand should not be judged wrong but left open for the expanding of what you do understand.

When I say “direction” I am talking about a real “thing” that can be known. Known like the Sun will rise in the morning, you can see in your mind the revolving Earth orbiting the Sun, it will happen.

Think of the words it would take to describe the Earth revolving and orbiting the Sun to a primitive person. The “thing” that I see like that in my mind, I call “direction”. I must use words with the intent of creating an image in your mind by describing actions related to something you know. I'm making up an explanation, like science fiction, because there is no pre-existing explanation.

It is a force. In a schematic drawing it would flow in a circuit from the individual human to a common receptacle and back to the individuals. The power source feeds the individual, their actions affect the force flowing through them and it is received, assimilated and returned with adjustments to maintain a balance in the force. It is possible to establish a connection to effect balancing of the force in the individuals as they act. By starting at a common point, the Feeling, with a common reference, BLitTeR, we will make a common circuit to balance our actions.

We will make the "direction" of the Fear of the Unknown change to the Unknown of Human Potential. The Unknown will always be "other than the physical", the driving force Fear will metamorphose into awe, of Human Potential. Human Potential will go into "other than the physical world" as is necessary for the continued progress of Mankind.

I say "into the physical world" as the description of an action which will mostly conform to the meaning of the word direction and I call it "direction". I say that we will change the "direction" to "other than the physical world" because that is the only alternative in the present level of knowledge.

"Into the physical world" is the process of creation; it is a continuous action of the force "directed" along a path that we identify as the physical world. The path is within specific parameters that are set by "direction". To change the "direction" to "other than the physical world" is going beyond the limiting specifications of the physical world.

"Direction" is a real "thing" that we can work with, it is about relativity. The theory used to be $E = ms^2$, s being the speed of sound, and it worked perfectly well at that point of progress into the physical world (time in history). And then along came Albert.

His theory opened the limits of energy, stretched them out to the limit of physical existence that is contained in light. The important point made here is that the physical world is contained.

The next step of relativity is not contained or limited to physical world parameters, it goes beyond the physical. As when Einstein opened the door to atomic energy, now is the time to open the door to the next level of energy. BLitTeR is the key.

Mankind's Mind Link