

Believe it or Not

You do believe in God. You can choose whether you want to believe yes or you want to believe not, that's your free will, God is "believing".

Your being is the belief of God. The same as a thought is energy in your mind, you are in God's believing. The same as God's belief creates you; our minds create the world we live in.

We are the constructors of Society, God's ongoing project. We are the mind of God in the physical world, all Life included, man has the joystick. Our believing is a copy of God's believing. Here and now is the culmination of all Believing. God's belief is Life, defining from that point forward is the belief of the Human.

I had a little insight last night. The understanding that I'm trying to share is not hard to comprehend, the comprehension is being blocked by the possibility presented to understand being impossible, to your mind. You will not believe in Paradise on Earth.

God gave this to me (30+ years ago), for here and now.

There is magic in believing
Let us keep our faith aglow
The tomorrow we're awaiting
May be closer than we know

There is magic in believing
Let us walk in humble trust
The shadows cannot linger
Dawn is near and come it must

The sun a constant miracle
Has never failed to rise
Impossible is not a word
That God would recognize

What so ever ye believe with all your heart and soul, so be it. That ole boy Jesus said that, he was pretty smart, I learned a lot from him right after God gave me the poem. There is a catch in "all your heart and soul" and to make it believe what you want is not always possible because of the input of others. I think that's because the soul is of the Human and is interconnected and must be in agreement to effect "so be it". The Human is capable of anything that we can "get together on" and want in our hearts.

We wanted to fly. We do. We wanted to go to the stars. We're on the way. We want peace on Earth. There is a way.

The way is in believing. Our believing has to "get together on" the way (get together with intelligence) to make it happen.

In the world today Society is so fragmented by cultures, language and religion that a single agreed upon way cannot be taught. There has to be a starting point for our intelligence to "get together on" a way. That starting point is one simple word to cross the barriers of culture, language and religion with a "common" meaning. The New Way will develop in the mind of the Human
