

Einstein Galileo and me

The best I can do in offering proof is my sworn statement; I took a pop-up IQ test (teasers). It was 40 questions, I took my time, but when I clicked on submit, I knew without a doubt that I had all the answers correct. I understood why they said my IQ was only 140, but I really liked them calling me a visionary philosopher.

I'm one of the wasted baby boomers. At that time in history conformity was a big thing and the intellect that questioned things more than normal was often given a bad rap and turned against the ways of academia.

A high school teacher trying to inspire me told me my IQ was over 150, "You can do anything you want in life". I said "Party"! So, I'm smart like the two great men.

There have been many smart men throughout history figuring things out; the flag that unfurls over my trio is "Radical".

Galileo not only blew their tops off with the vastness of a universe that was beyond their mind's ability to comprehend, but would belie all their divinely held knowledge. He was cool though so they let him live out his life in prison instead of executing him for heresy.

Albert who? A collegiate upstart said what? And that was seven years after he first announced his theory, when they stopped laughing long enough to ask a question. Not only was the idea of such an incredible amount of energy ridiculous, but he was saying that an existing premise used and taught by the highest minds of the field was wrong. He was never really accepted until the atomic bomb backed him up.

Radical. Those guys were beginners. They just had one subject to announce and told a small specialized group that they were wrong.

I'm telling you and Everybody, that Everything you think and believe is wrong. Wrong is a bad word to use because it makes you defensive. Everything is supposed to be as it is but now is the time and I have the way so we can fix it and make it better.

Society does have "direction". Everything you think and believe is of that "direction". To fix and make it better we change the "direction". I know how to change the "direction" and have no desire to change you.

It is such an incredible simple thing to do that people don't recognize it as significant and ask, "so what do we have to do? And immediately back it up with, "Who the hell are you to tell us what we have to do"?

I might as well be a Jehovah's Witness on a Jew's doorstep, SLAM!!! You never even hear me say, that's all I want you to do, I'm not telling you to change anything or what to think and believe.

In the process of trying to get some help to make a miracle happen I've been put down from every angle and called everything from fool to the anti-Christ. Preacher Dave, a Christian at a Jewish web site called me a silver tongued devil, when I gave him back his scriptures enemausly. That was big fun until the inquisition.

Please dear people I pray and beg for you to know the word, BLITeR, a verb,

"acknowledge the Feeling". The Feeling is of other than the physical world,
"common" to all mankind and linked to whatever you choose. Cosmic
Consciousness, God and Love are common examples.

That's all, know the word, please.
