

The Force “direction”

Scientists have gotten to where they are looking so far into the infinitely small that they can see that the building blocks of everything we can perceive in the physical world are made up of pure energy. That energy is the force I’m talking about.

Call it the force of God, all we are concerned with is the force, God is only the label for a point of reference, no dogma applies. The force comes FROM God into the physical world and creates everything we perceive. It begins in the construction of the elements and continues through Life into the infinitely large, God 2.

God and God 2 are the infinitely micro and the infinitely macro points of the universe where the force exists. Infinity contains God and God 2, the force comes from that to create the universe.

INFINITY; totally everything, nothing left out and nothing extra, no +s or –s, a perfect 0. For anything to exist there has to be something, energy (the force), going away from 0. The force goes away from infinity into existence and back into infinity, the space in-between the two points (our universe) is “other than 0”. Other than 0 is the force, + and – are the energy creating the matter of all that exists in what we know as the universe, at this level the balance is 0. This is a fact pointed at by all dogmas attempting to explain existence; “overall perfection does exist” and it exists all the way up to the level of human free will. Balance.

Human free will is the ability to go out of balance. It is contained at the level of “Society” (defined as; the total effect of the Human on Earth). Action taken that is out of balance creates the opposite equalizing energy that is returned to the Earth by Society. As ye sow so shall ye reap is absolute at the level of Society. The force that comes through the individual human and is collected and balanced by Society is “direction”.

Free will is another common dogmatic point, from the apple the snake sold the lady to the fire the dragon gave the man, some way, mankind got an advantage. It was a natural progression of possibilities in the creative process.

From the barren rock, a cinder from a great fire, building with expanding energy the oceans and atmosphere to where the next possibility was Life. Life, with the same expanding energy, traveled a progression of possibilities to the point where intelligence was formed that could manipulate its environment, free will.

The fallout from free will constructed a higher level of intelligence which is the brain of Society, a main frame home base computer. That higher level of intelligence has awareness of the perfect balance; it uses it to dictate the progression in possibilities that are necessary for balance.

Ideally the computer would return negatives and positives to their initiator, “he would always get what he deserves”. The computer doesn’t have a “common” for all of the input so that it can act on the possibilities that would be most favorable and just for mankind.

The “common” is well known by mankind. Groups of “common” agreement are the blocks of Society. In animals “common” forms herds and packs. It’s the highest level of physical understanding in relation to the perfect balance.

The computer brain higher intelligence is what we call Spiritual, it is other than physical. Many groups of “common” have made input to Society (the computer) in significant amounts and well enough formatted to make a program workable, for a specific time and place, so that the computer could assist the progress of the group to good. When a “common” is established for mankind a computer program will be established that will have the necessary input to function in selecting possibilities for balance with consideration of all human concerns.
