

Would You Go Crazy

Imagine yourself a baby boomer of above average intelligence, one of the wasted ones. You know back then excessive inquisitiveness and curiosity could mark a problem child, a troublemaker, labeled for life a deviate.

There are a few of these people in the prisons today, and when released they will start on the trip back rather than submit to the ignorance that labeled them.

Not you! You got an “insight” on the ignorance, “it is Society and you have to learn to live with it”, your savior. The insight came early in life, but late enough that the label was permanent.

Remember back to high school, there was this peer that shit happened to, “it could only happen to --?--“. That was you.

With the “insight” you live with and for the good of Society, ahhh, “it could only happen to you”, and it does and you have a special treatment label.

So...nobody promised roses, you started late you have to work at it to catch up. You keep going for the good.

Shit keeps happening. Unbelievable but true it happens to you.

You keep on for the good, the shit gets worse.

For thirty years after the insight you aim for good, to harm no one and the shit keeps hitting you in the face. On top of being intelligent, you are bull headed, forward with eyes open.

Would you go crazy or learn about how the shit works?